"Dr. Jenks," as I knew Stan, was one of the most influential teachers I had as a student. He had very high standards. I learned a great deal from him, not just about math, but about life. I struggled through his methods class, but went on to be one of his teaching assistants. He blessed my professional and personal life in countless ways.

While I am sorry for the loss of relationship with Stan, I am so thankful for having the honor of knowing him and his delightful wife Raymar. Stan's dry wit and gentle nature will be my treasured memories. Can't wait to see him again as we walk the streets of gold. May the peace of our Lord's presence surround Raymar in the loss.
